
Mass Graves in Aleppo

27/12/2016

Moscow, Dec 27 (Prensa Latina) The Russian Ministry of Defense denounced the finding of seven storehouses of ammunition and mass graves with dead bodies of Syrian citizens tortured and killed by terrorists in the city of Aleppo, that was recently freed by Syrian Army troops.

Inside those facilities, there were huge amounts of weapons, ammunition for several battalions, and a great number of corpses of people previously tortured, said General Major Igor Konashenkov.

Mines and traps were placed in a lot of places: floor, doors, walls, rooms and even streets, said the spokesman of the Russian Ministry of Defense.

'We found every sort of arsenals and solid proof of war crimes. Everything was carefully documented. We can show it to sponsors in London, Paris, Washington, on how they protected groups with such criminal behavior,' he said.

As the Russian President Vladimir Putin stated last Friday, Russia contributed to the achievement of a big humanitarian operation with the rescue of more than 100,000 civilians, retained as human shields, and the evacuation of approximately 36,000 armed people and their relatives, without fighting.

At the right moment, the Syrian representation to the United Nations revealed the names of the military experts from several western nations who were with the most radical armed people in Aleppo.
