
Second Iranian Tanker Reaches Venezuelan Waters

By: Telesur

25/05/2020

The vessel is being escorted by the Venezuelan Oceanic Patrol Yekuana, after it was located in international waters.

The second fuel ship from Iran, the Forest, arrived in Venezuelan territorial waters on Monday morning to supply gasoline to the Caribbean country.

RELATED:

Venezuela Warns UN About US Threat to Iranian Ships

The vessel is being escorted by the Venezuelan Oceanic Patrol Yekuana, after it was located in international waters.

Forest is heading to the port of the El Palito refinery, located in the municipality of Puerto Cabello, on the coast of the state of Carabobo.

"Forest and the Yekuana Oceanic Patrol are near Margarita Islands and are heading to El Palito," teleSUR correspondent Madelein Garcia recently reported.

"The first Iranian ship now in the El Palito refinery, in Venezuela. We follow the story."

This is the second Iranian tanker to reach Venezuelan waters for the purpose of delivering gasoline.

Second Iranian Tanker Reaches Venezuelan Waters

Published on Cuba Si (<http://www.cubasi.cu>)

Iran's gesture of solidarity strengthens diplomatic relations and trade agreements between the two countries.

The first Iranian fuel tanker, Fortune, arrived in Venezuelan territorial waters on Saturday night, despite the continuous U.S. threats to prevent it.

Forest and Fortune are two of the five oil tankers that Iran has sent to supply the Latin American country with fuel.

The ships Petunia, Faxon and Clavel continue their course to Venezuela and are expected to arrive in the country soon.
