Brasilia, Jan 24 (Prensa Latina) President Jair Bolsonaro confirmed at the World Economic Forum held in Davos, Switzerland, his bad conditions for exercising a physically and psychologically demanding role, an Estado de Sao Paulo editorial notes on Thursday.

The journal states that in an unprecedented humiliation, Bolsonaro 'avoided the press in Davos, canceling an interview and leaving Brazilian journalists and filmmakers, and foreigners waiting for him.'

The cancellation of the interview 'proved Bolsonaro's bad conditions for exercising a physically and psychologically demanding role.' the text stresses.

The article argues that 'Bolsonaro, unless there is another plausible interpretation for his attitude, he was incapable of withstanding tension during his first international event.'

The document also criticized the speech made by the right-wing politician in Davos and considers that 'a jumble with ideology and insufficient relevant information took place.'

This was more a version of an electoral speech, the editorial says, noting that, 'even the most conservative ones (in Davos) should be little interested' in restoring the values of the Brazilian family.'
