04/02/2019

British star singer and composer Ed Sheeran will do three concerts in Brazil in February, according to media reports.

The author of Shape of you will present in this South American country a show that forms part of the Divide tour, which began in March 2017 and will conclude in August, through which the 27-year-old artist promotes his latest album of the same name.

Sheeran will perform in Sao Paulo on February 13 and 14, at the Allianz Parque stadium, and will go up to the Arena Gremio in Porto Alegre on February 17.

This time, in addition to his guitars, the musician will bring his entire production for stadium performances.

With more than 38 million copies of his three studio albums sold to date, Sheeran is one of the most successful artists since the release of his first album +(Plus) (2011), with hits such as Thinking out loud or Shape of you, the most played track in the history of Spotify, a multi-platform application used to play music via streaming (download).
