

---

Whitney Houston's Precious Possessions are up for Auction

02/06/2016

Fans were left devastated by her premature death from a drug overdose more than four years ago. But now devotees of the late Whitney Houston can get their hands on some of the star's most treasured items, including her wedding dress and her first passport.

A collection of the late star's stage costumes, personal belongings, clothes and awards are up for sale online via Heritage Auctions.

Fans can place bids ahead of the live auction of 24 June and one of the most sought after items is expected to be the custom-made Marc Bouwer gown the singer wore for her wedding to Bobby Brown in 1992 in the grounds of her estate in Mendham, New Jersey.

A collection of the late Whitney Houston's stage costumes, personal belongings, clothes and awards are up for sale online via Heritage Auctions.

It's billed as a high-necked floor-length ivory satin gown with built in 'carnival' bodice and full-length sheer nylon sleeves.

The gown has a silk mesh overlay which is intricately decorated with iridescent sequins and bugle beads in various elaborate floral motifs.

